Introduction

A need for long-term futures research arises under the global uncertainty in the complex world. KAIST Graduate Program for Future Strategy is designed to foster future strategy specialists. The Republic of Korea needs to shift its paradigm from fast-follower towards high-technology and knowledge convergence in order to devise a new future leading paradigm. For this purpose, Korea needs to nurture creative and future-oriented experts who will successfully sail through the uncertainties of the future. In addition, future strategy research for policy issues continues longer (20~30 yrs) than presidency (5yrs) is needed. Since the relocation of major government departments and administrative agencies to Sejong, the Future Strategy Program strives to become a leading graduate school dedicated to exploring innovative policies and strategies based on future technology change.
