Introduction

LGenius Program is a cooperative program between academia and industry established to assist in training specialists in the display field to combine theory and practice through customized selection and curriculum provided by KAIST and LG Display(Ltd). It was started with joint efforts of six departments in KAIST (electrical engineering, Mechanical Engineering, physics, chemistry, biological & chemical engineering, material engineering) from 2011.

LGenius Program will provide students with opportunities to gain practical working experience through internships and joint thesis director systems. This program's aim is to jointly train and supply exceptional human resources in Display field with high-degree of interdisciplinary knowledge and skills, through the excellent education system at KAIST.
